New Mexico has it all, from the dawn of dinosaurs to the current space age. All over the state you can visit and enjoy awe-inspiring ruins and spectacular landscapes; view the stars thanks to New Mexico's remarkably dark night skies; enjoy local music and dance, and partake of locally brewed libations; take-in exhibits of local to international art, and historic re-enactments. Here is this year's sampling of the many remarkable events taking place in New Mexico during May, Heritage Preservation Month.

2019 EVENTS

On Long -Term Display

Setting the Standard: The Fred Harvey Company and Its Legacy

New Mexico History Museum

113 Lincoln Ave, Santa Fe

10 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Daily

$12 General Admission; $7 New Mexico residents

Will Rogers noted that Fred Harvey “kept the West in food—and wives.” But the company’s Harvey Girls are by no means its only legacy. From the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway’s 1879 arrival in New Mexico to the 1970 demolition of Albuquerque’s Alvarado Hotel, the Fred Harvey name and its company’s influence have been felt across New Mexico, not to mention the American West. The company and its New Mexico establishments served as the stage on which people such as Mary Colter were able to fashion an “authentic” tourist experience, along with Herman Schweizer who helped drive the direction of Native American jewelry and crafts as an industry. Setting the Standard: The Fred Harvey Company and Its Legacy, a new section that joins the New Mexico History Museum’s main exhibit, Telling New Mexico: Stories from Then and Now, helps tell those stories. Opening December 7, Setting the Standard uses artifacts from the museum’s collection, images from the Palace of the Governors Photo Archives and loans from other museums and private collectors. Focusing on the rise of the Fred Harvey Company as a family business and events that transpired specifically in the Land of Enchantment, the tale will leave visitors with an understanding of how the Harvey experience resonates in our Southwest today. <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

On Long -Term Display

Telling New Mexico: Stories from Then and Now

New Mexico History Museum

113 Lincoln Ave, Santa Fe

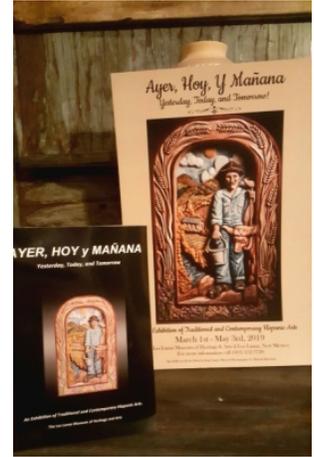

10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Daily

$12 General Admission; $7 New Mexico residents

Telling New Mexico: Stories from Then and Now, the main exhibition of the New Mexico History Museum, sweeps across more than 500 years of stories - from early Native inhabitants to today’s residents - told through artifacts, films, photographs, computer interactives, oral histories, and more. Together, they breathe life into the people who made the American West: Native Americans, Spanish colonists, Mexican traders, Santa Fe Trail riders, fur trappers, outlaws, railroad men, scientists, hippies and artists. <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

On Display Through May 3

Ayer, Hoy, y Mañana
Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow
Los Lunas Museum of Heritage & Arts
251 Main Street SE
Los Lunas
10 A.M. - 5 P.M.
Free Admission

Curated by artist Nicolas Otero, this outstanding landmark exhibit is the first time that so many artists have been highlighted under one roof. An exhibit guide contains the biographies of these sixty-four artists and photos of their work. For more information call (505)352-7720 or Cynthia Shetter at shetterc@loslunasnm.gov. To get to the museum, take I-25 south from Albuquerque to exit 203; then east on Main St (Historic Rte 66) over RR tracks to the corner of Luna St., under the water tower.

On Display Through May 27

Atomic Histories: Remembering New Mexico's Nuclear Past
New Mexico History Museum
113 Lincoln Ave, Santa Fe
10 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Daily
$12 General Admission;
$7 New Mexico residents

The Atomic Histories exhibit explores the most famous events, sometimes little known stories, and inventions born here which impact our lives, and helps to recognize the remarkable contributions of thousands of people involved in writing New Mexico's Atomic Histories for the last 75 years. Curated by Melanie LaBorwit, Educator with the New Mexico History Museum/Palace of the Governors. Photo courtesy of the Los Alamos Historical Society Archives. <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

On Display Through July 28

Designs that Defined the Museum of New Mexico
New Mexico History Museum
113 Lincoln Ave, Santa Fe
10 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Daily
$12 General Admission; $7 New Mexico residents

Santa Fe is widely recognized as a city of museums. These beloved institutions and their exhibitions have long been integral to the fabric of local culture. On Exhibit: Designs That Defined the Museum of New Mexico, presents a fascinating look back at more than a century of changing exhibition design in the historic state museum system. This "exhibit about exhibits" reveals how presentation techniques evolved and helped establish the unique character of the Santa Fe's museums. For information, check out the museum website: <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

On Display Through February 1, 2020

The Massacre of Don Pederro Villasur

New Mexico History Museum

113 Lincoln Ave, Santa Fe

10 a.m. to 5 p.m.. Daily

$12 General Admission; $7 New Mexico residents

This exhibition features 23 original graphic history art works by Santa Fe artist Turner Avery Mark-Jacobs. The display narrates the history of an ill fated Spanish colonial military expedition which set out from Santa Fe in 1720, a story that is also depicted in the History Museum's Segesser Hide paintings. <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

MAY 1

Life in the Civilian Conservation Corps During the Great Depression in New Mexico

New Mexico History Museum Auditorium

Santa Fe, NM

12 – 1 P.M.

Free Admission

Of all the New Deal agencies of the Great Depression era, the CCC was the most popular and many would argue, the most successful. Richard Melzer's presentation will focus on the importance of the CCC in NM as a whole, but especially on the lives of the 54,000 young men who enrolled in the program and served in the state. Dr. Melzer is the author, co-author, or editor of two dozen books and over a hundred articles and chapters about New Mexico history. Doors will open at approximately 11:30 A.M. Seating is limited, first-come-first-served. <http://nmhistorymuseum.org/>

MAY 1

Era of Megafires: A Multimedia Learning Experience

George R.R. Martin's Jean Cocteau Theater

418 Montezuma Avenue, Santa Fe

6 P.M.

$8 general admission

The rise of highly destructive megafires — wildfires over 100,000 acres — has become one of today's most pressing and complex problems, threatening our communities, homes, businesses and even our very way of life. Facing the reality of this issue is daunting, but like all wicked problems, through education and action we can change the way fire comes to our forests and communities. The Era of Megafires is a 60-minute multimedia presentation that combines the research of Dr. Paul Hessburg (Pacific Northwest Research Station, U.S. Forest Service) with the visual storytelling of award-winning film company, North 40 Productions. It's presented in the form of fast-moving, short, topic-based talks interspersed with compelling video vignettes and animations. The movie will be followed by a panel discussion with local experts to talk about the risk of wildfire here in Santa Fe, the impacts fire could have and what the Santa Fe Fireshed Coalition partners are doing to prepare. <https://jeancocteaucinema.com/era-of-megafires/>

The Coming of the Railroad to Southwestern New Mexico

Cross Point Church

Highway 180 E, Silver City

Dinner 6:30 P.M.

Presentation 7 P.M.

$20 Dinner Reservation

(Image courtesy of Robert C. Jones)

Although the Southern Railroad did not have an official “promontory” event, the arrival of railroad opened the door for mining economics, patient transfer to Fort Bayard U.S. Army Hospital, and tourism. Prince McKenzie, from the El Paso Railroad Museum, will relate this history which brought Silver City and Fort Bayard into the modern world. No longer was a stage coach needed to transport goods and passengers from Deming. Contact Cecelia Bell, Fort Bayard Historic Preservation Society, cecelialjb@aol.com for further information. The church is located approximately 3 ½ miles west of Santa Clara stop light or 3 ½ miles east of Silver City, on highway 180.

Santa Fe Opera Spring Tours: UnShakeable

May 5, 7:30 P.M., Fuller Lodge, Los Alamos

May 9, 7:30 P.M., Macey Center, Socorro

May 10, 7:00 P.M., Doña Ana Arts and Cultural Center, Las Cruces

UnShakable is an opera composed by conductor Joseph Illick with a libretto by Andrea Fellows Walters, the Opera’s Director of Community Engagement. Set in an abandoned theater in New Mexico 25 years in the future, UnShakeable is the story of Wyatt and Meridian, Shakespearean actors and former lovers who have varying degrees of memory loss due to Erasure, a viral pandemic resulting in memory loss. Separated from Meridian at the start of the viral pandemic, Wyatt has been searching for his love ever since. Exploring themes of memory, connection, and the power of story, UnShakeable incorporates language from some of Shakespeare’s iconic works to create a modern romance. For further information to go the SF Opera website:

7:00 pm – 8:00 pm, Free Admission

Dave DuBois, the State Climatologist for New Mexico; Director of the New Mexico Climate Center; and Associate College Professor at New Mexico State University, will give an update on the environmental indicators of climate change in New Mexico. Admission is free to this presentation in the Museum's Theater. Dr. DuBois says we have been seeing an increase in temperature of about 0.7°F per decade over the past 50 years across most of New Mexico. He will review the latest on climate change indicators across the state as of 2019 that include temperatures, drought, rainfall, extreme precipitation, winds, wildfires, growing season, and air quality. He will also look toward the future and discuss the latest climate scenarios for various locations in New Mexico and what that might look like to following generations with respect to agriculture. Dr. DuBois provides climate information and education to policy makers, the agricultural community, industry, educators, and the public. In addition, he also gives numerous talks and holds workshops every year on topics covering climate, drought, air quality, and climate change. Dr. DuBois teaches and trains students in the Plant and Environmental Sciences Department at New Mexico State University and maintains an active research program in air quality and climate. He is also the New Mexico Community Collaborative Rain, Hail and Snow state coordinator and looking for more volunteers to join. Although he is a native New Mexican, he grew up on a farm in rural southern New Jersey and collected weather data as a child. Dr. DuBois holds physics degrees from Rutgers and NMSU, and a doctorate in Atmospheric Sciences from the University of Nevada Reno. <http://www.nmfarmandranchmuseum.org/>

How Did the American Conquest of the Southwest Shape New Mexico's Future

Taos Center for the Arts

145 Paseo Del Pueblo Norte, Taos

7:00 PM

No Admission Fee

The area now known as New Mexico joined the Union when it was conquered by the U.S. Army. The U.S. incorporated the land after the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, but its inhabitants weren't automatically U.S. citizens; their status became the subject of negotiations and controversies over who could remain and who would be considered American. What did this history portend for Hispanos, Native Americans, and other New Mexicans? And how did the conquest of New Mexico and its subsequent territorial status shape the state constitution and the legal, cultural, and political customs New Mexicans live under today? Sponsored by ASU, Taos Center for the Arts and National Museum of American History via <http://www.ZocaloPublicSquare>; <http://americanhistory.si.edu/>; <http://tcataos.org/>; <http://www.asu.edu/>

The CCC constructed buildings within Bandelier's administrative area over eight years utilizing a workforce of between 180 and 200 young people. Today Bandelier utilizes between 5 and 10 old people to preserve this magnificent site. Come hear the story of how the NPS preserves this gem in the canyon. While many people are familiar with the historic buildings surrounding the Bandelier Visitor's Center, this walking tour will show the unexpected in the familiar. The talk will highlight little known preservation efforts to maintain the site and provide for greater public enjoyment. MAY 28

Mesa Prieta Petroglyph Talks:

Plumed and Horned Serpents of the SW

Northern New Mexico National Heritage Center

848 NM-68, Alcalde, 6 - 8 pm

$5 suggested donation

The Stone Calendar Project has been studying rock art sites throughout the Southwest and northern Mexico identifying glyphs that record specific times of the year using unique sun light and shadow interactions. The plumed and/or horned serpent is found at many sites, up and down the Rio Grande corridor, down into Mexico, and in the Four Corners region. The plumed serpent appearance in the southwest has largely been attributed to infusion of the Mesoamerican plumed serpent such as Quetzalcoatl. Serpents appear early in the Southwest and may have fused together with the plumed serpent to form the horned and plumed serpents seen at discrete locations in the southwest. This presentation will summarize the crested serpent rock art locations and regional styles, and compare them to other mural and ceramic images. The National Heritage Center is located on the east side of Highway 68. Look for the statue of a Spaniard on a horse in the front of the facility. Drive to the south of the building to park and enter the east entrance.

Walk with a Notable Local: Santa Fe Mayor

Alan Webber

5:30 pm- 6:30 pm

Meet at 200 Lincoln Ave. and walk from City Hall to the River Trail

In 2017, the Santa Fe Conservation Trust asked many community partners to join in an effort to improve public health, expand the use of city parks and public trails, and encourage and facilitate regular outdoor exercise by providing residents with knowledge and connections to existing walking and trail resources. Resurrecting a project called Prescription Trails and focusing on a national program called “Walk with a Doc,” Santa Fe Conservation Trust organized additional walking tracks resulting in a series of walks from May through October called VÁMONOS. This series of walks is one of several presented by Vámanos, a project of the Santa Fe Conservation Trust: <https://sfct.org/vamonos/>
